

Thomas Lyte Silver, the largest silversmith specialist in London.

Thomas Lyte Silver, one of the largest silver workshops' in London, announces the appointment of two preeminent silversmiths to this rapidly expanding workshop.

Mick Wellsman, has over thirty years experience, spending the last twenty-three at Asprey. With an outstanding portfolio, he is at the helm of this fine craftwork.

Keith James has specialized in silver polishing for seventeen years, and also joins Thomas Lyte from Asprey.

“This is an important development for Thomas Lyte silver, giving us increased capacity and now making us the largest London based workshop. We are delighted to snap up Mick and Keith – their expertise is phenomenal and a huge asset to our team. Their skills have been passed down from generations and sadly, this has become a rare art-form in this country,” Kevin Baker, CEO, Thomas Lyte

Thomas Lyte Silver was born out of a number of London workshops and more recently with the acquisition of The Essex Silver Company. Already, the workshop is the largest in London supporting the Thomas Lyte luxury brand and will be expanding over the next few years, with a bigger workshop and the creation of new apprenticeship programs. Building and expanding English silver is central to Thomas Lyte’s philosophy of supporting English manufacturing, design and craftsmanship whilst ensuring the longevity of a traditional English industry.

The Thomas Lyte Silver workshop is responsible for the refurbishment of the FA Cup each year, and has undertaken special commissions for Royal Palaces across the globe, a bespoke commission for Sir Richard Branson – the Bishops Rock Lighthouse Trophy, and has made many well known sporting trophies for clients in Asia, the US, and Europe.
